What is Interlibrary Loan?

Interlibrary Loan, or I.L.L. for short, is a service that makes it possible for you to access books, articles, and other resources that the library does not already own or license.

How does it work?

Let’s say you found the perfect article but the library doesn’t have it in print or online.

First, click the green TU Link button wherever you see it to start the request process.

Second, select “I’m with Howard-Tilton” from the list of options and log into ILLiad with your Tulane username and password when prompted.

Third, make sure the information in the request form is correct and click Submit!

How do I know my requested item is here?

You should receive an email letting you know your request is ready for you. See the back of this page to learn how to access your ILL items.
How do I get my requested item?

Log into ILL directly using the login feature in the upper right of the Library’s website (www.library.tulane.edu)

I’m still having problems, is there someone I can talk to?

Yes! Stop by the Research Help Desk on the first floor or the Interlibrary Loan office on the second floor of the Library.
